Installation Success Stories from Window Film Dealers Around the World

Panorama Window Film Secures Standard Petroleum

A division of Standard Oil, Standard Petroleum of Bridgeport, Connecticut, distributes gasoline and diesel products to gasoline stations throughout Connecticut and is the largest family-owned heating oil company in Connecticut. Standard Petroleum had just moved into its new office building when employees started to complain of excessive glare impacting their day-to-day efficiency.

Because they didn't want to shut out the natural light by using blinds or other window coverings, executives opted for window film. They selected Panorama® Slate 40 4 mil for its optical clarity and virtually invisible appearance.

What's more, they relished the idea that this solar reflective film also offered the added benefit of security protection.

Not only does the film offer substantial heat and glare reduction, it also holds glass in place should a window be broken, either from storms or potential break-ins. Finally, Standard Petroleum received a 16-year warranty coverage, which was also attractive to them.

Panorama Slate 40 is a dual-reflective film which offers exceptional solar rejection performance with a more neutral finish. This film maintains views with reduced interior and exterior reflectance, while increasing privacy by day; offering an attractive complement to the buildings aesthetics and efficiency.

Without impacting the company's workflow, the film was installed. The film allowed employees to maintain clear views and complemented the building's architectural style.

Day or night, Panorama Slate 40 4 mil provides an uncompromised view, increases privacy, bolsters security and solves any building's glare problem.

"Our employees are our greatest asset and we were concerned about their comfort in the new office space. There were constant complaints of glare on computer screens impeding their work. We couldn't be happier with the results we've seen since the installation of Panorama window film." – Jennifer Starkey
